

Northwest Bethel —

Clarice Gibeon, Corres.

July 13 and we are having a nice rain after a hot, humid week. Not a very good week to work out door as it was so hot. Everything in the garden is coming along fast. The George Gilberts have beautiful flowers along the fence, by the house and a little garden out front. At least I am finding people at home, or in the house, because of the rain; but most of the news is we have been haying, working in the garden or yard work.

If All the Skies Were Sunshine

If all the skies were sunshine, Our faces would be fair To feel once more upon them.

The cooling splash of rain If all the world were music, Our hearts would often long For one sweet strain of silence, To break the endless song.

If life were always merry,

Our soul would seek relief,

And rest from weary laughter In the quiet arms of grief.

Mr. and Mrs. Jeff Yates and children were at Long Lake camping over the week end.

Sent in by Eva Yates:

Monday morning and not as nice as the past few mornings. Looks like rain and we need it — the wind the past few days has done a good job of drying everything. The Go-Shoes have hung on the hook all week till Friday and then only a quick trip to town. Saturday night we went to Bear River Grange for election of officers. Not members enough to even hold a meeting. So we had our supper and did a lot of talking. Our next meeting will be Aug. 8 with the usual pot luck supper. Members have no interest and no matter how inconvenient it's going to be to some it looks now like Bear River Grange hall doors will be closed to all very soon. For how long no one knows. We still have members enough to carry on our Grange but they can't or won't come through, that's it.

Sunday, Peggy Blake, Joe and Eva Yates joined the Bernard Hutchins family for a cook out at East Andover. A good time and full bellies was had by all.

Mr. and Mrs. David Buck from Florida was an overnight visitor of his brother, the Jeffrey Yates, and family, Wednesday.

Gary Yates of Norway joined the family of his brother Jeff Wednesday night for a cook out.

Sunday evening callers of Joe and Eva Yates were Bryce and Barbara Yates and Paul Billings of Bryant Pond. Come again.

The Yates', Eva and Joe, called on Benton Swan, Saturday night.

James Swan has been working on his house lot the past few days. He sure is a busy boy and has a lot of wood on his yard to show for it. He works — he doesn't seem to have to stop neither for cigarettes nor coffee breaks.

Lots of people are interested in the big round rolls of hay in the fields here and there. The cars going by will stop and take pictures of the bales of hay with people sitting on them or standing beside them.

The inscription on the facade of the Supreme Court building in Washington reads, "Equal Justice Under Law."

The traditional Greek sculpture representing this concept always has been a woman blindfolded and holding the scales of justice.

Despite these two facts, it took two centuries for the first woman to be nominated for a spot on the Court. The momentous occurrence finally came to pass last week when President Reagan nominated Arizona Court of Appeals of Judge Sandra D. O'Connor to replace Associate Justice Potter Stewart on the Supreme Court.

The move was long overdo. No one has ever made the argument that women are not able to hold their own in the legal arena with men. Women have proven themselves as excellent lawyers, and in many states they have sat on state supreme courts and courts of appeal and have served as federal jurists.

Nevertheless, the Supreme Court has remained an all-male bastion for its entire history. In the early years of the court, perhaps this was understandable, since women rarely were accorded the full rights of citizenship granted to their male counterparts. But for the court to have remained all-male up into the late 20th century is unfathomable.

The irony is inescapable. The Supreme Court stands as the final word on the law of the land in our Constitutional system. Its duty is to seek truth in this nation of laws that we call America.

Yet until now, we have chosen to neglect a basic truth when it comes to filling vacancies on the Court. That truth, simply put, is this: women can be excluded no longer from their rightful roles as equals in our society.

One must question how this Court could extend equal justice under law when the majority of the nation's citizens—women—never had representation on the Court. It made no sense.

I expect Judge O'Connor to be confirmed by the Senate, as she has compiled a sterling record of service as a legislator, lawyer and jurist in Arizona. But what will this mean for the Court? Will "Equal Justice Under Law" take on a new and dramatic meaning?

On the surface, it is doubtful that the influence of Judge O'Connor, as one member of the nine-member Court, will be dramatic. No one knows how she might rule on constitutional issues facing the Court. Presidents and governors have been surprised in the past by unexpected opinions rendered by jurists thought to be ideologically tagged.

But at the very least, the appointment of Judge O'Connor to the Supreme Court can serve a useful symbolic purpose. With a

MAINE DEER HERD NOT THREATENED BY COYOTESSAYS UMO PROFESSOR

It is helpful to know what kind of territory certain fur bearing animals and predators take as their homes in Maine? Dr. James Sherburne, cooperating associate professor of wildlife resources at the University of Maine at Orono, thinks so and is conducting a research project aimed at determining why such animals select a certain habitat and how these animals get along with one another.

The end result of such research should prove most helpful in assisting the state to develop realistic management plans for such fur bearers as the marten, fisher, fox, bobcat, and coyote. It's all called predator ecology.

Most controversial of the animals being studied by Sherburne and other UMO faculty people is the coyote which seems to be in the middle of groups wishing to protect it or kill it off. The groups seeking to eliminate the coyote from Maine or curb its activities contend that the animal is a threat to the deer population. Dr. Sherburne disagrees.

"The deer population is not in any danger, immediate or long range, from coyotes," he says.

His research studies how these animals utilize their habitats, including the types of prey they take, their home ranges, activity patterns and how they interact with each other. Study areas are selected on the basis of physical properties of the terrain, the forest type, size, accessibility and harvest (capturing) records.

The animals are trapped live, marked with ear tags and outfitted with collars containing tiny radio transmitters. They are then monitored through all seasons on foot and by planes until enough locations are gathered to establish living patterns, according to Sherburne. These patterns might show that one coyote, or a pair of coyotes, may stay primarily in softwood woods while another, or pair, stays primarily in blueberry land, he notes.

Different animals are found in different habitats for different reasons. A female coyote, for instance, may stay in softwood stands because she has pups, says Sherburne. Habitat requirements need to be determined, he adds.

Proper management of animals such as the coyote may ultimately determine whether or not the animal will continue to be supervised on a sustained basis.

Funding for this research totals some $160,000 per year for four

WALKING WITH JESUS CHRIST

Through the miracle of modern medicine a person may regain the mobility of a defective knee or hip joint by the surgical implant of a prosthetic device—and, even the replacement of a heart may once again give a new lease on life.

The physical heart is the center of man's life blood stream, while the spiritual heart is the center of the inner man—the impulse of life—the place of all that is good and evil in thoughts, words and deeds. It is from here that motivation to exercise our fancy comes from—whether in deeds hastily or thoughtfully carried out, they represent the character of our selves—with the end result of misery—unless the heart becomes the dwelling place of Jesus Christ.

The Bible tells us "all have sinned and have come short of the glory of God." Literally, it means we are all condemned to hell. We may gain riches, friends and all the pleasures of this world—but we'll never be satisfied—permanently; for there is in every heart a deep need. Young and old alike endeavor to fill this need by work, play, trips, foods, drugs, alcohol—name it—they all spell failure—for "For where your treasure is, there will be your heart also." Luke 12:34.

It is only when we let Christ

WOODSTOCK HISTORICAL SOC.
ENJOYS PROGRAM ABOUT CEMETERIES

Steve Seames presented a program on the restoration and preservation of cemeteries at the last meeting of the Woodstock Historical Society. He ranged over a variety of subjects. He spoke of various agencies involved in preservation, research on obscure grave sites, the nature of some of Woodstock's cemeteries, old epitaphs, various methods of preservation from cutting bushes to cleaning stones, and he gave a demonstration of cleaning a stone with chemicals. It was a lively, engaging presentation.

Also at the meeting recent donations were cited, Robert Billings gave a large metal file; Larry Billings, a collection of books by Maine authors and a small reference library; Hazel Brooks, an old tapestry; Annie Crockett, a collection of old pictures including centennial pictures of the town and also the high school yearbooks; Glen Brooks, some very old news articles; Earle Noyes, a beautiful tintype of the old carriage shop; Dorothea Hooper, assorted pictures of the town; and Mr. Lakeway, a Hemingway milk bottle, an article on Birchmere, and a ski medal.

Curator Larry Billings reported that the Society needs household items and tools and explained a questionnaire members could fill out to make a collection of reminiscences of town history.

Tickets are still available from Society members for prizes to be awarded at the August meeting. Donor of prizes are: The Boiler Room, $25 dinner for two; Village Store, a turkey; Larry's Garage, oil change, and grease job, $15 value; Telephone office, $8 certificate; Kay McAllister, pillow; Starr Seguin, $5 certificate; Fay Corrin, hanging plant pot; Nadja Boilo, picture; Mary Billings, billfold. This month there will also be a Society fair July 25 from 10:30-3:00 at the Grange Hall.

There will be plenty of booths and a food sale. Plan to participate in some of these activities and help this new organization to continue growing.

Elden Hathaway has promised to donate at least one phone, possibly more, to the Historical Museum. The Society is very grateful to Elden, a member of its Board of Trustees, for making certain that some artifacts from the last old-style phone system in the country will thus be preserved for the citizens of Woodstock. Pictures will also be taken of the phone company for the museum files.

The South Woodstock Church organ is also now in the museum, thanks to the Willing Workers. Ralph Hoyt and Fred Sawyer helped move the organ. Elsie Davis also gave some documents from the South Woodstock Post Office.

FRANKLIN GRANGE

Franklin Grange, Bryant Pond, held their regular meeting July 6, when the new officers for 1981 and 1982 were elected. They are as follows: Master, Richard Felt; Overseer, Carl Brooks; Lecturer, Olive Davis; Steward, William Riley; Assistant Steward, Preston Cobb; Lady Assistant Steward, Lorene Cobb; Gatekeeper, Robert Hoyt; Treasurer, Lettie Brooks; Secretary, Harris Hathaway; Cleres, Alice Hoyt; Pomona, Edith Hathaway; Flora, Ruby Emery; Executive Committee, Lettie Brooks.

The Deputies, Brother Lewis and Sister Myrtle Bisbee, were present for inspection.

The Lecturer's theme, "Maine," graced the program by the singing of "Maine Is Our State" followed by 16 questions on Maine. The Deputies were called upon for a few remarks. The closing thought, "Think It Over" and "Put On Your Old Gray Bonnet" accompanied by Brother and Sister Riley, was sung.

There were 15 members and two guests from Oxford Grange present. Refreshments were served after the meeting.

The next meeting will be Ladies' Night led by Mildred O'Bleness on Monday, July 20.

Did you hear anyone say this last week, "Isn't it HOT!"

But the days here were beautiful; filled with breezes at almost all times.

In spite of certain discomforts it is a nice time of year. There is the spirit of tranquility over all the land. The sun is a golden ball high in the blue. Barn swallows swoop, crows scold, cows gather in groups under trees and chew and chew, on and on.

The sweet fragrance of freshly cut grass will in the sunshine. The clack, clack of machines can be heard across the fields for it's haytime.

Different people with different interests would have written about different things. But to us these are the simple, the good, and the satisfying things; not for everyone I'm sure, but no other place would suit us better.

How much easier it is today to bale than when it had to be pitched on the rack and stored away on the barn scaffold.

After my day of lawn mowing or working in the garden and Clyde's in the hay field how good it was to spend the evening on the lawn. At first, half the water lay dark and obscure, while over the other the setting sun still played, transmuting it into a sheet of tremulous gold. We could glimpse the mountains folding one behind the other and a few clouds above the trees.

Wood thrushes sang in the tender twilight of a summer evening, illuminated by the flicker of fireflies, those tiny stars of earth, glowing near the woods.

Below us across the road the dark mirror of the outspread pond shone beneath the moonlight; threading with slim tremulous white fingers the foliage of the trees. My flower garden, that small space of blossoms, was flung into deep shadow by the branches.

We listened to the far-from-silent evening. Twice mother duck appeared with her brood then gripped by some excitement flapped away with babies close by.

Green frogs occasionally broke out in sudden strumming, which ended as quickly as it had begun.

We saw bats and birds high, high above the trees, the pond, and the house.

Robins and purple finches added their voices to the shadows staying until the stars came out.
